*Editor's note: Since 1873, the U.S. Naval Institute has championed intellectual debate on key issues for the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard. This past Tuesday, "Military.com" published a point-counter point discussion on whether the mission of the U.S. Marines could be divided up and absorbed into the Army and Navy. We thought the Post membership might enjoy reading both articles. Click on the links beneath each of the headlines to open each article.
